EXILE RETREAT IS SELECTED

Deposed King Alfonso Will Live in Fontainbleau, Near Paris.

GOES TO LONDON TUESDAY

Queen Will Go to New Home; Son To Enter English School.

By The Associated Press

PARIS, April 20—Alfonso of Spain will establish the seat of his exile at Fontainebleau, a little more than 15 miles from Paris, putting up his family at the Hotel Savoy there for the time being.

He will go to London on business Tuesday, perhaps motoring down to Calais for the night boat tonight. Among other things he will arrange to place the Infante Juan, his son, in an English school near London, and other business will keep him in London for a few days.

Queen To Leave Tuesday

The queen is leaving for Fontainebleau Tuesday and Alfonso will join her and their children when he comes back from London. These arrangements were disclosed today by the Duke of Miranda, chief of the Spanish royal household.

Announcement of Alfonso's plans came after it was reported that he was not the welcome guest in Paris his hearty popular reception Thursday may have led him to believe.

Fearing an attempt against his life, it was understood today that the police of Paris have suggested tacitly that he seek a refuge in some smaller place, where a better watch may be kept on him and his family.

In Beautiful Setting

The town of Fontainebleau is situated in one of the most beautiful forests in France, covering 42,200 acres. It is a summer resort

POLICE PUZZLED BY MYSTERIOUS HANGING

17-Year-Old California Girl Suspended from Limb of Tree.

By The Associated Press

SAN DIEGO, Calif., April 20 — The death of comely 17-year-old Louise Teuber and the lack of clues to the slayer, who apparently strangled her and then hanged her nude body to a tree, puzzled police here today.

The body was found by a picnic party yesterday, dangling from a high tree limb in the eastern fringe of the city. Police surgeons said the girl had been dead eight hours.

Miss Teuber was a clerk in a five-and-ten cent store and the daughter of William Teuber, barber shop proprietor. Girls who were her friends at the store said she gave up her job Saturday night and told them she was going away, but refused to say where.

At the scene of the tragedy police gathered two slim clues. One was the double half hitch knot which bound the rope about the girl's neck. The other was an army blanket found with the girl's clothes, purse and a package containing a pair of hose she had purchased Saturday.

The knot, police said, apparently had been tied by some one familiar with handling rope.

POLICE CHIEF HEARING SET FOR TONIGHT

Both Sides Line Up To Determine Fate of Marks.

HEARING IN COURTHOUSE

Strelitz To Represent Department Head; W. P. Moloney Attorney for Mayor.

Both sides today were marshaling forces for a public hearing before the civil service commission tonight to determine whether Police Chief William E. Marks satisfactorily conducted his office during a 90-day period of probation.

The hearing will get under way at 7:30 p. m. in the common pleas courtroom with the three members of the commission presiding.

Mayor Brings Charges

On one side will be Mayor L. Don Jones, who has charged Chief Marks with incompetency and inefficiency and who has asked the commission to approve his dismissal of the chief. Mayor Jones will be represented in the hearing by Attorney W. P. Moloney, he said today.

On the other side will be Chief Marks, who will defend himself against charges of Mayor Jones. Counter charges of lack of cooperation of his superiors including Mayor Jones and Safety Director T. E. Sonnanstine, made in a reply Chief Marks filed with the commission last week, probably will be brought out in the hearing. Attorney J. Malcolm Strelitz will represent Chief Marks.

Asks Dismissal

The commission is interested only in testimony which will guide it in acting on Mayor Jones' request for the approval of Marks' dismissal, G. E. Waddell, chairman of the commission, said today.

Judging from the amount of public [illegible] in events which have followed each other in rapid succession since the expiration of Chief Marks' probationary period a week ago last Saturday night, the courtroom will be packed when the hearing begins.

RANSOM IS PAID TO FREE MISSIONARIES

Two Americans Liberated by Outlaws in Central China.

By The Associated Press

HANKOW, China, April 20 — Ransom demanded by captors of two American missionaries held by bandits or Communits of central China has been paid and the missionaries have been released. Similar payment and release are expected in the case of a third.

The two released are Rev. K. N. Tvedt of St. Paul, American Lutheran Mission missionary, held captive by Chinese Communists near Hwangan, northern Hupeh, since last Oct. 17, and the Rev. Allie Godfrey Lindholm, of Ortonville, Minn., of the Scandinavian Alliance mission at Kalgan, captured by bandits last Thursday.

A ransom of $10,000 Mexican and $5,000 worth of medical supplies, was paid for the release of Tvedt, who arrived here today from Sungfow. He showed the physical effects of his ordeal.

Tvedt said Bert Nelson, another Lutheran missionary who was captured at Kwangshan, Honan, last Oct. 5, was being held at red headquarters in Hwangan. Tvedt quoted the outlaws as saying Nelson would be released upon payment of a $10,000 ransom.

Frank P. Lockhart, United States consul general at Hankow, today advised Peiping legation that Miss Esther Nordlund of Chicago, Miss August Nelson and Rev. Oscar Anderson, presumed Swedish, and all belonging to the Swedish Covenant mission, were captured by bandits at Kingchow, Hupeh, April 17

STEAM SHOVEL PUTS 150 ON JOB IN WEEK

Result of General Business Increase; Hiring for Hoover Dam Project To Come Later.

Although the Marion Steam Shovel Co. is not yet taking on additional men to meet orders that will come to the company under the contract for furnishing all shovels for the gigantic Hoover dam project in Colorado, employment offices of the company were deluged with applicants this morning.

Production under the Hoover dam will not begin until J. H. Watters, president of the company, now on the west coast, returns to Marion [illegible] of the company officials here announced. Hiring of men for this increased work also awaits the return of Mr. Watters.

Although operations have not increased as a direct result of the Hoover dam order, 80 more men were put to work this morning. A total of 150 men have been added to the personnel of the company within the last week, swelling the total number of employed to 800, according to officials.

Additional men at work today were rehired as a result of the recent Russian government order for five shovels and other business recently obtained by the company. Various increases in the working schedule have been made as orders call for increased work. The schedules now range from a minimum of three days a week to full time in others.

Indication that the Hoover dam contract had the effect of immediately raising the market value of Marion Steam Shovel common stock was in evidence on the New York curb today when the stock registered a high of $6 and a low of $5.75 up to noon. The stock was quoted at a little above $5 Saturday. Two hundred shares changed hands in the morning market session today.

Minister Gives Sermon Though Locked in Jail

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., April 20 — Going to jail was an adventure and an opportunity for Rev. Mr. George S. Bright, 61, of Mansfield, a Lutheran minister.

Rev. Bright was arrested on a charge of speeding and lodged in city jail several hours yesterday until he could post bond.

He proved a good sportsman, police said, when the Sunday morning services were called, the Rev. Bright asked permission to conduct them. It was granted.

In a brief sermon Rev. Bright urged the prisoners to obey the laws. He told the prisoners he was speaking to them on the same basis as a prisoner.

A bond of $50 was placed by Rev. Bright for his appearance in court Thursday.

FOREST FIRE DOOMS OHIO NATURAL PARK

By The Associated Press

MANSFIELD, O., April 20— Clearford state park, three miles south of Loudenville, Ohio's most beautiful natural park, appeared doomed today by a forest fire which started yesterday and had spread over several hundred acres.

The fire was reported spreading at the rate of three feet a minute, while attempts to halt it were being made, an area of several miles had been burned over by this morning.

Only a few homes are near the park and as yet they had not been threatened.

The fire was believed to have started from cigaret stubs, thrown into underbrush by picknickers yesterday.

A portion of the park was known as Wooster forest preserve. Several thousands of new trees were planted in this section a year ago by students of Wooster college.

PERILOUS JOB!

Is Police Work Dangerous? Here's the Best Answer.

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, April 20—The peril of police work formed the subject matter of the conversation Sergent Thomas Maloney was having last night with a friend as he sat at his desk in a police station.

"Policemen are," he said, "in constant danger. Our profession is the most hazardous in the world."

"Fiddlesticks!" interjected his listener.

"Yes, sir," the sergeant went on, "it's a dangerous business. Fortunately I have escaped harm. I've never been shot, and my gun has never failed, but all of these things could have happened."

To emphasize the word "could" he brought down his fist with a bang. There was a crash and his chair gave away, and he fell to the floor, winning the argument with two fractured ribs.

INVESTIGATION OF MYSTERY DEATH BEGUN

Body of Bucyrus Woman Is Found in Well, Sheriff Says It's Murder.

DISAPPEARED SATURDAY

Deputy Sheriff Finds Corpse of Miss Lucille Drew on Neighbor's Property.

Special to The Star

BUCYRUS, April 20 — The body of Miss Lucille Drew, 25, who disappeared from her home at 1004 North Sandusky avenue Saturday morning, was found in a well at the home of a neighbor, Frank Bair, shortly before noon today. The coroner and other county officials this afternoon were conducting an investigation in the hope of establishing the cause of her mysterious death, and to learn if there were any evidence of foul play.

G. Fred Volmer, sheriff of Crawford county, late today indicated a belief that Miss Drew had been slain.

Volmer said a cursory examination showed that only a slight amount of water had reached her lungs, indicating that she was dead or near death when submerged in the well.

Well Top Found in Place

He said the boards on top of the well were intact when his deputies started a search for Miss Drew who had been missing since Saturday noon.

The sheriff said Frank Bair, told him he had found the boards about eight inches apart Saturday, and replaced them after he and Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy Drew, parents of the girl, had made a cursory examination of the interior, without finding any trace of the girl.

Sheriff Volmer and Coroner J. E. Mannhardt said they would send the girl's stomach to a chemist for examination as no marks or violence were found on her body.

According to the family Miss Drew left her home Saturday morning intending to go to the home of Mr. Bair, a quarter of a mile from the Drew residence, where on a number of different occasions she had been employed as a maid.

The well in which her body was found had been abandoned for a number of years and the wooden cover was somewhat decayed. The well which was about 25 feet from the Bair home contained about 10 feet of water, which was being pumped out to ascertain if the body could have been held on the bottom by a stone.

Bair it is said, reported to authorities that he had seen Miss Drew approaching his home and when he looked a short time later she had disappeared. Her disappearance was not noticed until about noon when her brother Melvin inquired for her at the Bair home.

County authorities were notified by Miss Drew's parents, Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy Drew, about 7 p. m. Saturday.

According to the family Miss Drew was in the best of spirits when she left home. She wore a housedress and carried no money. Authorities searched the vicinity and when no clue was found feared the woman may have been kidnaped. Police throughout the state were notified and a description of the woman was broadcast over stations in Cleveland and Columbus.

Bair, whose home is about a quarter of a mile north of the Drew residence, is about 70 years old and resides alone.

New Revolution in Seething South America Calls for Action

THREE CRUISERS SENT

Same Policy as in Nicaragua is Adopted; No Forces Go Inland.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, April 20. American officials today pushed forward precautionary measures to protect their citizens from the backwash of revolutism along Honduras' northern coast, although official reports failed to show that any American thus far had been injured. Nevertheless, the cruiser Memphis, having touched north from Puerto Cabezas, Nicaragua, stopping briefly en route at the American built city of Puerto Castilla, rode at anchor off La Ceiba, the largest seaport of the troubled coastal area, while the cruisers Trenton and Marblehead were speeding across the Caribbean from Cuba to other Honduran coast towns, where they were expected to arrive tonight.

Began Saturday

Official dispatches showed the revolutionary outbreak began Saturday afternoon and spread along northern Honduras in the area behind the principal fruit exporting seaports of Tela, La Ceiba and Puerto Castilla.

Apparently it was in support of the presidential aspirations of General Gregorio Ferrera.

Minister Lay at Tegucigalpa telegraphed the state department that no revolutionary forces had yet come nearer than 30 miles to any other principal seaport and predicted that the rising would soon end. The rebel forces he said, appeared to be made up of unemployed, communists, and the cliff raft and criminals of northern Honduras.

Adopt Safeguards

Nevertheless, the American consuls at the coast towns have considered the situation sufficiently dangerous to ask that warships be sent.

Minister Lay said loyal troops had regained possession of Progreso, 60 miles from Tela, after the rebels had raided it, robbed the bank of Honduras branch there, requisitioned arms and supplies and commandeered railroad rolling stock with which they advanced to Uraco, 40 miles from Tela.

Although major interest centered on Honduras, the United States continued to watch Nicaragua. The gunboat Asheville moved 60 miles from Cape Gracias a Dios to Puerto Cabezas, taking the post left vacant by the Memphis. Before the Memphis departed, however, she debarked an officer and 13 sailors with machine guns, a force believed sufficient for immediate needs. The aircraft carrier Lang-

TRIO GETS $731 IN HOLDUP ON KENTON AVENUE

Make Get-a-Way West on Harding Highway in Stolen Automobile.

PULL JOB AT 1:10 P. M.

Car Owned by Johnson Curl Taken from Parking Lot.

Three masked gunmen held up the Shell Oil Co. service station at the corner of Kenton pike and Silver street about 1:10 p. m. today and escaped with $731 in cash and checks. The gunmen were driving a Buick automobile with Ohio license 85-308, the property of Johnson Curl.

The car was stolen from a parking lot next to the Danner Buick Co. of North Main street.

Vernon M. Marks, station attendant and R. F. Smith, a collector for the Shell company, were in the station at the time of the robbery. When the bandits' car neared the station two of men jumped out and covered Marks and Smith with revolvers, ordering them to put up their hands. One of the pair cooked his gun when Smith was slow in complying with his order. The third member of the trio remained at the wheel of the car.

After forcing the two employes to deliver all of the money in the cash drawer and in their possession the pair jumped into the car and fled in the direction of Kenton.

Of the loot obtained by the trio $[illegible] was in cash. The remainder was in checks. Of the cash $68.88 was the personal property of Marks. Four hundred dollars of the loot was in the form of checks payable to the company and $82.50 was in personal checks of Smith.

Neither Marks nor Smith could give a very clear description of the trio except that they were well dressed young men. All were masked.

Epidemic of Strikeouts Hits Major League Batters

CLEVELAND BOWS TO TIGERS, 7-2; REDLEGS LOSE FIFTH IN ROW

Philadelphia Edges New Pork Yanks 3-2 in Closely Contested Game.

BY HUGH S. FULLERTON, JR.
Associated Press Sports Writer

If major league pitchers can continue their performances of the season's first few games, some of the strikeout records may be in serious danger. Whether it is the changed ball or a mere epidemic of poor batting eyes, fanning this year seems to occur more often than in recent seasons.

Seven hurlers in the two major leagues struck out five or more rivals in yesterday's eight games.

Big Fred Fitzsimmons of New York Giants led the way, fanning seven of the Boston Braves as his team won 9 to 2. Fitz limited the Braves to six hits.

In a long drawn out game which saw the Chicago White Sox whip the St. Louis Browns, 12 to 6 14 men struck out. Sam Gray, one of four St. Louis pitchers, and credited with the loss and Garland Braxton of Chicago, each whiffed five. With a near record crowd of 80,000 looking on Rube Walberg of Philadelphia bested Charley Ruffing of the New York Yankees, 3 to 2, in a pitching and fanning duel. Walberg struck out six and allowed the same number of hits. Ruffing fanned five while giving seven hits.

Charley Root of the Chicago Cubs and Remy Kremer of Pittsburgh also were credited with six strikeouts apiece. Root was wild at the start but good Cub fielding aided him in turning back the St. Louis Cardinals, 4 to 1. It was the first defeat for the Cards. Weak base running by the Reds rendered Kremer's six walks harmless to Pittsburgh as the Pirates won 5 to 1.

Lloyd Brown's mound work helped Washington take the lead by shutting out the Boston Red Sox 8-0. Earl Whitehill, Detroit, turned back Cleveland with seven hits, stopping all of the Indians but young Joe Vosmik to win 7 to 2. Vosmik's homer brought in both Cleveland runs and with a single left him with a batting average of .667 for five games.

Philadelphia's two Elliotts combined to hold Brooklyn to seven blows in the remaining National league game and hands the Robins their fifth straight defeat, 6 to 4, in ten innings.

2 CROWNS AT STAKE IN SINGLE BATTLE

Kid Berg, Tony Canzoneri To Meet in Chicago Stadium Friday.

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, April 20—Champions both, Tony Canzoneri of New York and Jack Kid) Berg of England will clash at the Chicago stadium Friday night in a ten round bout in which both the lightweight and junior welterweight titles may be at stake.

Berg's junior welterweight crown is certain to go to the winner and Tony's 136-pound title also will be tossed into the ring in the event that Berg makes the class limit.

The Briton, a tireless, aggressive fighter who smothers his opponents with the stream of leather he tosses, probably will be a decided favorite at ring-time.

Detroit and Boston' have booked the only other bouts of national interest. At Detroit tonight, Johnny Peters, English bantamweight, tackles rough and ready Vidal Gregorio of Spain. A ten rounder between Johnny Risko, veteran Cleveland heavyweight, and King Levinsky of Chicago, tops Boston's cards tomorrow night.

Tod Morgan, of Los Angeles former junior lightweight champion, was forced to cancel his bout with Cecil Payne, Louisville lightweight, scheduled for Los Angeles tomorrow night, due to a wrenched shoulder suffered while training.

SPORTS

BY BOB KIRKPATRICK

City recreation baseball club managers will note with interest an announcement made Saturday in regard to practice on the various city park diamonds.

Since the beginning of the practice periods a couple of weeks ago there has been considerable difficulty among the various teams in regards to which team has a prior claim to the diamonds for practice games. Since practice started it has generally been accepted that it is first come, first served. The team that gets to a particular diamond if first has insisted on possession, regardless of plans of any other team.

* * *

Now order is apparently due to come out of chaos. Officials of the city park commission have given the baseball commission the privilege of granting teams the right to use a particular diamond on a certain night. The commission has in turn delegated its secretary, Elmer Shaw, the authority to allot the diamonds.

* * *

In the future teams wishing to practice on city park grounds will eliminate a lot of difficulty if they will secure the possession of the diamond they wish to use ahead of time. There will be no preference given in the awarding of diamonds for practice. Shaw will grant the use of a diamond for a practice game and other teams will be expected to practice elsewhere. It is probable that two teams will be placed on each diamond. Incidentally this rule will not apply to the Steam Shovel diamonds inasmuch as they are not city property.

* * *

The first of a series of stories dealing with the season's prospects of the various city recreation ball teams, which was scheduled to appear today has been deferred. Calvary Evangelical Sunday school will be the first team considered. The initial story will appear on this page Tuesday.

"DUDE" CHICK MEETS BOZINIS IN MAIN GO OF WRESTLING CARD

Another evening of slam-bang wrestling is in prospect for the fans who tonight attend the regular bi-weekly grappling program in the Steam Shovel gym. The final winner of the main go match will probably be decided in about the same way as has been the case for the last several bouts. One of the contestants will either be disqualified for unnecessary roughness or one will be knocked stiff and the bout will go to the opponent by default.

Nick (The Greek) Bozinis will meet "Cowboy Dude" Chick in the main go of the card. The match will be a two hour time limit affair with the best two falls to win.

In the semi-final bout Father Lumpkin, former Georgia Tech football star, will tackle Ad Herman of Colorado in a 30 minute fracas. Herman is a newcomer to the ring here but is reputed to be pretty tough. Lumpkin installed himself as quite a favorite here several weeks ago.

There will be the usual two preliminary bouts but the principals have been named for only one of them. Tom Temple of Marion and Roy Rhinehart of Mt. Gilead will clash in the second prelim, a 20 minute match to a decision. This match has been looked forward to for some time by local partisans and should be highly entertaining. The performers in the other prelim have not been announced.

Crowds Throng to Stadium To See Yanks in Action.

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, April 20—The New York Yankees apparently are bent on setting a new attendance record for the major league baseball this season. They've played five games so far and drawn an aggregate attendance of 205,000, an average of 41,000 a game.

Yesterday 80,403 jammed the Yankee stadium to watch Philadelphia trip Joé McCarthy's men, 3-2. The only larger crowd came to the stadium in September, 1928, when 85,265 saw the Yankees beat the A's twice in a Sunday double header.

COLONELS, BREWERS DEADLOCKED IN A. A.

Crippled Columbus Red Birds Whip Kansas City Blues 4 to 3.

By United Press

COLUMBUS, O., April 20—Louisville, the 1930 champion, St. Paul and Milwaukee were tied for leadership of the American Association today with four victories and two defeats, apiece.

Louisville's 8 to 7 victory over St. Paul Sunday was made possible by Dud Branom's home run with the bases filled and two out in the ninth inning.

The crippled Columbus Red Birds, having only half of the regulars in physical shape for the game, turned in a 4 to 3 victory over Kansas City. Three runs in the seventh gave the Birds their margin. Percy Lee Jones was credited with the victory.

Milwaukee defeated Toledo, 4 to 2, when Claude Kubek, the winning pitcher, drove in the winning run in the eighth inning. Conally and Ferguson hurled for Toledo.

Scoring a dizzy total of nine runs in the eighth inning, the Indianapolis club downed Minneapolis, 12 to 9. Two triples by McCann and a double by Montague aided the big rally.

Track Stars To Compete in Ohio Relays Saturday

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., April 20—Prepared for a fresh assault on existing records, one of the finest groups of track and field athletes ever assembled for a relay carnival is expected to participate in the eighth annual Ohio relays, May 1, and 2, at the Ohio State university stadium. Heading the list of competitors will be stars from at least seven of the Western conference schools.

n addition Drake, Notre Dame, Pittsburgh, Kansas State teachers and other institutions of similar caliber will be represented. College events will find a liberal representation of the teams in Ohio as well as leading competitors of the middle west. In the high school division Columbus Central, four times state champion, will defend its honor against all comers.

For the University of Illinois, Lee Sentman, holder of several world's records in various hurdle events, will be on hand as well as Verne McDermott, holder of the Western conference indoor pole vault record of 13 feet 9¼ inches. F. L. Purna, able shot putter, and O. D. Berron, capable high jumper, will also represent the Illini.

Heading the Michigan delegation will be Eddie Tolan, dash man and one of the few men to conquer George Simpson, "fastest human."

For Ohio State, leading candidates for honors will be Jack Keller, hurdler. Gulford Houston, broad jumper. William Bloor, in the 440, and Rupert Beetham, half miler.

Ernie Pinckert, University of Southern California halfback, and All-American, may be switched to fullback next fall.

GRAIN PRICES IN EARLY DROP

Reports of General Drouth Breakup Results in Downturn at Chicago.

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO April 20—Grain prices underwent early setbacks today as a result of reports indicating general breakup of drouth Material enlargements of the amount of wheat on ocean passage counted also as a bearish factor Opening at 1-2 cent off to 1 4-8 5-8 up, wheat afterward continued to sag Corn started unchanged to 1-2 down, and subsequently declined all around

Rain and snow both in United States and Canadian wheat territory more than offset talk of continued good North American exports demand, with fresh early upturns in Liverpool quotations Fears laid stress on weakness of Argentine markets and on the fact that supplies afloat for Europe totaled 45,432,000 bushels against 43,064,000 and 35,984,000 at this time last year Russian advices of delayed sending because of unfavorable weather and owing to shortage of draft animals and feedstuffs were apparently ignored

Closing prices at Liverpool came earlier than heretofore on account of beginning of summer alteration of clocks abroad, and had a bearish effect here because showing evident reversal of sentiment with bulls at a disadvantage Liverpool finished at 1-2@5-8 pence net decline, and a decided increase of selling pressure in Chicago followed Notice was taken, too, that British millers had formally resolved to refrain from buying United States wheat on certificate final terms. Corn and oats went down with wheat.

Provisions paralleled hog market declines

The Stars Say—

For Tuesday, April 21

THE lunar transits influencing the affairs of this day may be read as furthering inclinations to make sudden changes or to launch into new lines of initiative and adventure Despite minor setbacks or postponements, there is prospect of much enterprise and striving for new contracts or business, with financial possibilities fair in the way of speculation or investment, although real property may give concern.

Those whose birthday it is may expect the presentation of an unexpected opening, calling for abrupt change of plans and possibly environment. Matters in connection with new enterprises will be lively and profitable, but real estate or industry as well as employment may be uncertain and progress difficult. But new contracts, original ventures speculation, investments are under a promising sway A child born on this day may be original, versatile, enterprising and have good judgment. It should make its way to fair position in life through its own ingenuity and continuous effort.

$40,000 SUIT TO OPEN TUESDAY

Father of Teacher Asks Damage for Tragic Death of Daughter.

A $40,000 lawsuit in which the Marion county commissioners are named defendants, will go before a common pleas court jury Tuesday.

The action was brought by Charles E Lukens, father of Hilda Lukens one of four school teachers who met a tragic death when an automobile in which they were riding, left Harding highway three miles west of Iberia and plunged into a creek.

This suit is one of three brought against the commissioners for damages amounting to $120,000. The other two were brought by D B Lehman, administrator of the estate of Hilda L Lehman and J A Munyan, administrator of the estate of Besse G Munyan. Miss Lehman and Miss Munyan were among the victims of the tragedy.

Lukens charges the commissioners with neglect to protect the six-foot drop off the side of the road with a guard rail, and asks $40,000 damages for his daughter's death.

In answer, the county commissioners say the road is a part of the state highway system, and that the obligation of protecting the drop with a guard rail was not one belonging to the county commissioners.

Cattey & Coble, Crestline law firm, will represent Lukens, and County Prosecutor R. M. Wilhelm will represent the commissioners in the trial.

The outcome of this trial probably will have a direct bearing on the other two actions brought against the county commissioners.

It is true, all wage scales have not been maintained. Although the present scale of wages would be equivalent to a large increase if commodity prices and the cost of living should stay down, we ought, I believe, to make every effort to maintain the wage scale.

HEAVY DAMAGE DONE BY BLAZING FORESTS

General Rains Aid in Fighting Extensive Woodland Fires.

By United Press

ASHLAND, Wis., April 20—Fires which swept across large tracks of timber land in northern Wisconsin and Michigan Sunday were believed under control today after general rains had come to the aid of hundreds of state rangers and volunteers who fought the flames.

With one village almost entirely destroyed, several persons killed and untold property damage to cut-over timber lands and forest settlements, the rain reduced the blazing woodlands to smouldering fires just in time to avert a disaster in the northlands, forestry officials said.

The village of Tipler, a sawmill settlement, was reduced to nine buildings before the rains came. The woods surrounding the town had burned since Saturday, destroying the homes of 200 residents.

Two men were burned to death near Morse where fires destroyed stores of stacked lumber while other residents escaped in trucks. Herman Anderson, a recluse living near Ino, saved his life by plunging into a well and remaining in the water all night while the forests blazed around him

SHERIFF WARNS OF CONFIDENCE GAME

Says Merchants in Small Towns Victimized in Ad Racket.

Warning to merchants in small towns in Marion county to be on their guard against a confidence scheme being worked by two men was issued through the office of Sheriff C. C. Fye this morning, after reports that Green Camp and Waldo merchants had been victimized.

The men collect in advance for advertising space on a poster or leaflet to be distributed in large numbers in and around the town where they are working. After obtaining the money, the men leave town, according to reports given officials of the sheriff's office

The men are described as being about 30 and 50 years of age. They usually establish credit by making a sizeable deposit at a local bank before attempting to sell the advertising. When the advance collecting is done, they withdraw the deposit and leave.

No reports of the amounts of money the men obtained in Green Camp and Waldo could be obtained by officials this morning.

Water Valley, Miss., Offers Haven of Refuge for Alfonso.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, April 20—Alfonso may be an unwelcome guest in France as the exiled king of Spain, but there's at least one place that wants him—the chamber of commerce of Water Valley, Miss., which has addressed an invitation to him, through the president of France.

"Our city can not offer you the piquant wines of old Spain," it said, "but we can furnish you with pure water, distilled in nature's laboratory. Also the many cows that feed in our green pastures assure you and your family a bountiful supply of nourishing milk.

"We invite you to take up your residence here in Water Valley, where wild-eyed revolutionists will bother you no more."

NOTED DOCTOR GIVES PUBLIC HEALTH TALK

Dr. Crile Cleveland Surgeon, Suggests Future Means of Combating Disease.

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND, O., April 20—It's the seemingly little things—minor ailments and motions—that wear man's body out, in the opinion of Dr. George W. Crile, but the time is coming when they will be battled at yearly examinations.

The heart and liver is worn out by comparatively slight troubles, such as infections of the tonsils, teeth, sinuses, gall bladder and genital tracts, the famous Cleveland surgeon said in a public health lecture yesterday.

In the future, however, these ailments will be discovered at their start as medical science is directed more to maintaining public health.

When this time comes, treatment of a disease will be viewed as the doctor's failure to prevent it, he said.

He asserted that a person experiencing long, grinding emotions such as worry, can lose as many as 100,000 brain cells. "We must intellectualize our fears and other emotions, not emotionalize," he said. "If emotions can be reduced to a physical formula, we may learn to count the costs of emotions and rectify the damage."

WOULD BUILD NAVY TO LIMIT OF TREATY

D. A. R. Leader Says U. S. Justified in Constructing More Ships.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, April 20—The navy construction to the London naval treaty limit was advocated by Mrs. Lowell F. Hobart, president-general of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

At the opening session of the annual D. A. R. convention here, she said "there is every justification for our building up to the London naval treaty requirements."

Mrs. Herbert Hoover planned to attend and more than 3,000 delegates were expected.

Stressing perils of unemployment, Mrs. Hobart asked for a definite program in the United States to unite the people of this nation for Americanism." She called attention to the Russian government's five-year plan; lauded the army and navy as "peace institutions," and urged enlistment of youth in patriotic movements.

"You have all experienced disagreeable events in your separate states, based upon the leadership of Communists who have come to this country to make it another Soviet Russia," Mrs. Hobart said. "Taking advantage of unemployment, they have reaped rich rewards in membership and in spreading the kinds of sympathizers toward hatred of the United States government and opposition to those who own or manage business."

Farm Land Sells for More Than Appraisal

One of the first properties sold at an administrator's sale for more than its appraisement over a long period of time, was the John Kimber farm sold Saturday afternoon. The 58 acres, with house and barn, were appraised at $4,350 and sold for $4,850. The farm is situated a mile south of Owens.

The sale price placed the land value to approximately $83.50 an acre. Recently land offered at public sales has seldom brought more than two-thirds of the appraisement value of the property. John H. Clark, attorney, stated Saturday afternoon.

WESTERN PICTURE HAS NEW ANGLE

A western romance with a new flare to it—that is "Woman Hungry," a First National picture which opened for a three-day run at the Ohio last night. The show is distinctly different from the "ride'm and rope'm" cowboy picture, being more dignified and having a deeper plot than most western plays.

Sidney Blackmer, as Brand, one of a trio of "bad men" one night ride to the ranch where Judith (Lila Lee) is alone. Two of the trio begin throwing dice to see whose girl Judith shall be. Brand takes a hand, shoots it out with one of them and buys off the other after getting Judith's promise she will go away with him if he protects her from the other two.

They are married and go to Brand's gold claim. They are prosperous but Judith, feeling she has been purchased with gold, is unhappy and finally leaves Brand to go to her home in the east. Brand follows on business, and eventually they are reunited.

MAD PURSUIT by Jessie Douglas Fox

(Copyright, 1931, Jessie Douglas Fox)

CHAPTER 1

Memories at Sunrise

SOMETHING must have happened in the Villa Rosa, for a strange quiet brooded over it.

Nora Lake, waking on her lumpy Italian bed, looked out at the brightening sky and the cypress trees looming black against it. It was at this hour each morning that Magdalenna arrived with a clash of pots in the kitchen. But this morning it was quiet.

Nora rose to look down over the valley to the blood-red roofs of Florence, the golden Arno winding beneath its bridges, and to the purple Appenines rising to meet the sky.

Just so had she watched last night when very late she had heard the crunching of wheels before the gate and her father's boisterous shouts of welcome.

The moonlight had picked out a tall shaggy fellow, the painter, Nicholas Thayer, whom they had known at the Pensione Solito.

"This, my dear fellow, is our magnificent villa," her father cried.

"It's not bad."

"Bad? We have a garden, a bathroom with a tin tub, beds like sacks of potatoes and a cook of voluptuous beauty!"

They had disappeared indoors, with a load of canvases.

Why had her father kept such a mysterious silence about this visit? Nora knew how jealous he was of other painters and especially of this Nicholas Thayer with his assumption of superiority. Nora remembered how Nicholas Thayer had looked with contempt on the old maids at the pensione and had turned on her with that same insolent indifference.

Nora brushed back her dark hair, thrust her feet into straw sandals and, dragging a coolie jacket over her pajamas, went down the stairs to the salon. The room reeked of smoke and spilled wine. She unhooked the blinds, but the last one resisted her.

The salon looked tawdry. At night when the candles were lit it seemed almost palatial, but in the pitiless morning light the marble floor was seamed with cracks; the carved chairs were worm-eaten and the tapestry, with the Medici coat of arms, sagged from the wall like a rag.

She picked up two glasses and a bottle and went toward the stairs to the kitchen. Magdalenna resented intrusion of her quarters, and it was no wonder, Nora thought, stepping over a string of red peppers that had fallen from the rafters. The charcoal brazier was unlit, on the table was a bag that had disgorged its contents of gnarled green apples, and onions and garlic rioted beside it. Yet in this kitchen Magdalenna could conjure up delicious dishes.

Nora picked out the least worm-eaten of the apples, poured herself a glass of milk and cut a slice of bread from the end of the loaf that was not yet moldy. She unlatched the kitchen door and walked up two steps into the garden.

It was cool and fresh in the narrow wild garden. She could hear the birds talking cozily among themselves about what they would have for breakfast. Here at the end of the garden stood a plaster faun that enchanted her father. Green patina overlaid one dancing hoof, but the lewd satirical grimace on his face had not been altered by rain or weather.

She put down her glass of milk, stepped out of her sandals and felt the wet grass about her ankles. From where she stood she could see the walls that closed in the sun-baked villa with its green blinds faded to the blue of old turquoise. A rose bush, with glossy leaves and pale buds that smelled like apples, had given the place its banal name.

In this moment she was lost in the narrow wild garden, soaring up among the tree tops on and on through golden air like the bird that darted upward and melted into the blue. It lasted a moment, this strange ecstacy, and then she was standing ankle-deep in wet grass, hungry and bare-footed.

Leaning over the stone on which she sat she saw one of the snakes that lived there had come out to sun himself. He was a little fellow marked with a narrow golden stripe. She bent down and picked him up by the tail. There was a writhing motion and something slithered away through the grass and she was holding only his shell.

"Come back, you left your pants behind!" she called to him. Her father was like that, she thought; no matter how hard you seemed to pinch him between thumb and finger he had a way of leaving you with his empty skin.

For the supreme fact of their common existence was not that they were penniless, not even that they were adventurers, but that her father's restlessness was a consuming passion. How many places they had lived in this last year alone! Julian Lake was enchanted with a view of the Mediterranean or a dark hill that rose behind them. He could paint here, he would tell Nora exultantly. But before the month was out the villa was too chilly to work in or he was dying of the sultry heat. So they moved on.

Once in England she had a cough that annoyed her father. So he gave her 10 pounds—a magnificent sum—and told her to do what she chose with it, but to leave him in peace.

Nora, munching her apple, took out this precious memory and hung it in the sunlight, much as Magdalenna hung out her scarlet and yellow skirts.

She remembered how she hired a bicycle and set out to explore the world. She had stopped at little lost villages where she had a clean bed for the night for two shillings. She had talked to anyone who would answer her, and many had seemed to find this slim, brown, blue-eyed child strange and lovely. It was in Sussex she had met old Mr. Frewen.

He was the rector of the small village, and he had taken her into the rectory with its faded chintzes and its shabby books. A tall, fair boy with a pale, clear-cut face had bowed to her without a word. Miss Frewen, the rector's sister, had poured tea from the Sheffield service. Nora glancing about the room felt its charm. It was a home. It had deep roots. She wished she might stay there forever. The gentle old man questioned her about her travel.

"And where is your father?" he had asked.

"Oh, he was tired of me," Nora explained, "but later I shall join him."

"And your mother?"

"She died when I was 7. I've had to bring my father up alone." Nora confided, "and sometimes I don't think I've made a very good job of it."

Mr. Frewen said it would be very pleasant if they went to see the garden. He left them walking alone. But once he had gone the boy said:

"Dreadful old fogies, aren't they? I'm glad I go up to London tomorrow."

"I loved them."

He smiled and one of his eyebrows lifted in a superior way.

"When you are as old as I am you'll know most of our elders are awful people."

"How old are you?" she asked.

"Twenty," he said with pride.

She hastily decided to conceal her age from him. No one would think her 15, she was such a tall, brown, thin creature.

"You only think they're dreadful. If you knew Julian, my father!"

Impetuously she told him how unlike a fogy her father was.

"Well, he may not be so bad," the boy admitted. "Lets you alone, doesn't he, and doesn't go nagging at you to do what you don't want to."

"What do you want to do?" she asked.

"I rather think I shall be a poet," he said casually, "not any of this minor stuff, you understand. But something—" he made a sweep with his arm, "something good."

His face was charming when he smiled. It lost the look of insolence and seemed young and boyish.

They saw the rector coming toward them and the boy said in that same casual tone, "Your hair is like dark beech leaves."

She knew that it was time to go as the rector joined them.

"Good-by, my dear child, and God bless you," the old man said.

She saw the boy's greenish eyes and his fair hair as she turned the corner on her bicycle and waved a last time with an abandon that almost sent her into a ditch.

She tried to remember his name now. Suddenly it came to her. Jonathan Thayer. Perhaps she had remembered it all so vividly this morning because the tall shaggy painter was named Thayer also. She would ask him if he had ever known a Jonathan Thayer.

The sun was hot on her bare head. The dream was fled. She was back again in Italy sitting on a rock in the sun, staring at the villa that Mrs. Nevers had lent them while she went on to the Italian lakes.

To Be Continued

Ingrown Nail Turns Right Out!

Pain Stops Instantly!

"Outgro" is a harmless antiseptic manufactured for chiropodists. However, anyone can buy from the drug store a tiny bottle containing directions.

A few drops of "Outgro" in the crevice of the ingrowing nail reduces inflammation and pain and so toughens the tender, sensitive skin underneath the toe nail, that it can not penetrate the flesh, and the nail turns naturally outward almost over night.—Adv.

Civil War Vet To Recall Days At Gettysburg

James Buchanan, 89-year-old Civil war veteran and former resident of this city will spend a part of the summer visiting the Gettysburg battlefield and other scenes in the vicinity. The trip will be made in company with his daughter, Mrs. J. J. Cogley of Rawson, near Findlay, with whom Mr Buchanan is making his home.

One of the places which will be visited by Mr. Buuchanan is the old spring near the battlefield where he and his comrades went for water to quench their thirst and to fill canteens for themselves and comrades.

At the time of the battle Mr Buchanan says this spring was just a shallow hole but the government has cleaned it out and placed a concrete curb around it.

Mr. Buchanan will celebrate his ninetieth birthday June 22. He served under General W. S. Hancock at Gettysburg and declares that the general saved the day at the turning point of the conflict.

Mr Buchanan served as messenger for the general and in reminiscing of the days of the war recalls that when his company was stationed near the Buchanan home the general gave him a pass and allowed him to go home for a short visit.

Mr Buchanan was acquainted with President Buchanan but was not related to him. The families lived near each other, the former president owning a farm in Lancaster county. Mr. Buchanan recalls having been taken to Philadelphia by the President in the latter's buggy.

Mr Buchanan is spending a few days with friends here.

One result of the Seabury investigation, if there is no other result, will be to cause perjury, as practiced in the New York municipal courts, to lose at least a degree of its great popularity.

A Los Angeles showman has cabled Alfonso XIII asking him regarding his willingness to appear in a movie. There's hardly any happening, these days, which can not in some way be utilized for a little free publicity.

Our foreign trade showed an increase of $49,000,000 in March over the preceding month; $13,000,000 of the increase being represented by exports and $36,000,000 by imports, but the month's total of $448,000,000 was $132,000,000 below the trade of March a year ago. We are picking up, but world recovery from depression is yet far from complete.

Gambling equipment valued at $15,000 was seized in a raid in a night club over near Mansfield. Now who would have thought our Richland capital friends would go in for chance sufficiently to justify an expenditure like that?

The Spanish republican government has announced that it has decided to rescind the $60,000,000 credit recently negotiated by a group of international bankers. No ground for complaint over that. It may save Americans the $36,000,000 of the credit floated over here.

Seemingly Reno, having tried out open gambling, isn't absolutely sure that it either is going to have it or wants it. In any event, the bars will be put up against it till the city council considers the advisability of passing a gambling licensing ordinance and consideration isn't to be given such an ordinance until the city election, which is to be held May 5.

Federal Employment Service.

In vetoing the Wagner bill providing for improvement of public employment agencies, early in March, President Hoover made it known that Secretary of Labor Doak was drafting a plan covering the same ground for presentation to the next congress. The President presented a complete explanation of his objections to the bill, among them being one that it would abolish the present federal employment service "built up over years and out of great experience."

The chief criticism of Mr. Hoover's rejection of the measure was that it left the unemployment situation without aids other than that provided by the existing set-up and that it would be nine months before Secretary Doak's draft could be presented to the first session of the new congress, and unemployment would continue in the meantime.

That latter objection is overcome by Mr. Doak's announcement last Saturday of a complete reorganization of the United States employment service. There will be forty-eight state employment bureaus, to be operated under seven special divisions: building trades, mining and quarrying, manufacturing, transportation, clothing, mercantile and marine seaman. The service will be coordinated in such a way as to give the applicant for work the national field from which to choose. In the reorganized bureau will be a director of veterans' service, a director of farm service, a chief clerk, a director of information and a special representative.

This is good news to labor, and it will become better news as the organization's scope of service is extended. The United States employment service does not mean a great deal at the present, but with Mr. Doak's program to follow it should become a vital helpful factor in the welfare of American labor.

It Means Much to Marion.

Some nights ago, a local speaker told a gathering of citizens, assembled looking to the formulation of a plan for the quickening of community spirit, that what this city needed most was the development of a spirit of optimism to replace what to him appeared to be a spirit of pessimism.

If a spirit of optimism is really what has been lacking to get our city back to normal economic conditions, it seems to have been inspired by the announcement in Saturday's Star that the Marion Steam Shovel company had been awarded the contract for furnishing all the steam shovels to be used in the execution of the contract for the construction of the Boulder dam, the largest project of its kind in the world and which, when completed, will be one of the greatest engineering accomplishments of history.

We can not recall when any announcement along the line of that of Saturday ever served to arouse so great a degree of enthusiasm. Coming, as it did, at a time when this city, in common with all the country—in common with all the world, for that matter—is feeling the effects of a long period of commercial and industrial recession, the effect of the announcement was all the more noticeable. Its effect was immediate. It could hardly have been otherwise. An award of such possibilities as this must necessarily prove as the result of the magnitude of the Boulder dam undertaking would not have been lightly passed over in a city many times the size of our own. It is the expectation that the work at Boulder dam will cover a period of six years, and cost anywhere from $250,000,000 to $350,000,000 before it is finished and ready for operation. Necessarily this will create an added demand for Marion shovels over a period of four or five years, if not longer. To secure such an award is not only enough to arouse enthusiasm and encourage optimism, but also rekindle a feeling of civic pride, a feeling which in recent years seemingly has suffered a recession of almost as great measure as that which has marked our economic situation.

And is there not justification for a spirit of civic pride? Is it not a matter for pride to us of Marion that one of our products should be thus linked with a mighty project; that the same shovel which built the Panama canal is also to be used at Boulder dam and thus associate our city with the greatest two engineering feats on the western hemisphere?

Incidentally, it may be said that there are strong indications of further industrial developments, probabilities which may become actualities in the very near future if they are not already the latter, which will serve still further to stimulate the local satisfaction aroused by the announcement of the closing of the Boulder dam contract by the Marion Steam Shovel company.

Word comes from Cleveland that, while Hon. Newton D. Baker will not make a fight to secure the 1932 Democratic presidential nomination, he will not refuse it should the nomination be offered him. Come to think of it, it's the exceptional man who does "not choose to run."

Scholarship in State Institutions.

A suit filed by a resident of Portsmouth to test the authority of a state institution to drop a student because of poor scholarship raises a question of importance to those institutions and all who support them. The plaintiff's daughter was dropped from her class at Miami university because she was unable to meet class-room grade requirements.

Miami university, with a teaching staff of more than 170, extensive physical equipment and an enrollment of more than 1,700, exists for one purpose only—to educate students who attend it. In return for the grants it receives from the state, it is expected to give the best service of which it is capable. That consists, obviously, of training young men and women to hold responsible places in the various fields which they choose after terminating their terms. The university would be falling down grievously, therefore, if it did not uphold high standards of scholarship. It necessarily must exercise the prerogative, granted private institutions without question, of "weeding out" all students who do not or can not meet the established requirements. Taxpayers' support should not give the individual taxpayer a right to interfere so long as the institution operates in the manner approved by sound judgment for institutions of its kind.

In the suit mentioned, there may be extenuating circumstances not appearing, of course. There would not appear to be much doubt, however, concerning a state educational institution's right to maintain certain scholarship requirements. Without that right it would cease to be an educational institution in the true meaning of the phrase.

From Nicaragua comes reports of the beheading by the bandits of Americans who sought to protect their lives and property. Another label on the gangs 'insurging' under that gentle spirit, Sandino.

A bill has been offered in the Ohio general assembly to bridge the use of the radio for the slandering of the living or the dead a criminal offense. Well, why not? But why apply the thing only to the radio. Why not make it broad enough to protect the dead from slander or libel no matter how uttered?

A survey made by the bureau of labor statistics covering seventy-five manufacturing industries employing 1,400,000 persons shows that in March the rate of quitting work was 3.95 to the hundred while the accessions were 3.67 to the hundred. At last we have real figures showing that unemployment is being reduced, not so rapidly as might be wished, it is true, but being reduced just the same.

George Akerson, formerly secretary to President Hoover and now a movie executive told at Atlantic City gathering of screen people that the public has tired of gangster and sex themes and a clean type of offering is in demand. One can not help but wonder if Mr. Akerson got that idea from an announcement made by Will Hays two years ago. There would be nothing wrong in doing that for it is evident that the Hon. Mr. Hays' medicine didn't take.

CONGRATULATIONS.

Editorial Opinion.

MR. COUZENS LECTURES BUSINESS.

The lecture read by Senator Couzens to the Chamber of Commerce of the United States in anticipation of its convention at Atlantic City makes interesting reading. Its tone is characteristically senatorial, and the particular source from which it emanates likewise gives the statement a quaintly humorous tinge.

For it is pretty well understood that the gentleman who undertakes to admonish the business men of the country with respect to their responsibilities as owners, custodians or trustees of the active, working capital of the country, keeps his own extensive millions carefully stowed away in vaults, in the form of tax-exempt securities. If Mr. Couzens is engaged in productive business that employs labor and helps keep money fluid and the country prosperous, the fact is not generally known.

This financial detachment may enable the senator to maintain a certain aloofness of mind, but it prevents him from appearing as an exemplar of the virtues he urges on other possessors of material resource, and tends to provoke a mild excitation of the risibilities among the irreverent.

So far as failure by business in the United States to steer a wise course and prevent economic trouble is concerned, doubtless those interested in finance, commerce and manufactures have made their mistakes and have sinned their sins. But they also have been up against some highly-complicated and far-reaching problems, and a considerable part of the condition with which they have had to cope has been the result of developments in other parts of the world and entirely beyond their control. This country has by no means been the sole sufferer from economic trouble, nor has it been the worst one.

It is rather ridiculous to imagine that the responsible business men of the United States are careless of the economic welfare of America or have done less than their best to combat depression since it arrived. They are all human beings and subject to the limitations of human knowledge and foresight, but nobody is more interested in seeing the land continuously and healthfully prosperous and happy than they are. Nobody can be more anxious to see unemployment disappear and give way to a condition of general content and comfort. Their most absorbing interests are inextricably bound up in the ability and disposition of the general public to trade dollars for goods. It ought not to be necessary for anybody to assure Mr. Couzens of this, or to argue with him about their desire for a quick return to sound times, and for some sort of a program which they can inaugurate to make that return permanent.

Sensible people in the United States understand the difficulties and disposition of the business world pretty well, even though they do at times criticize some of the things it does rather roundly; and with cause.

Criticism doesn't necessarily imply condemnation or repudiation, and there isn't much but moonshine in the idea in the back of Mr. Couzens' head that the public is seriously disposed to turn to congress and hail it as a redeemer of the country from economic perplexities.

The manner in which government intervention has "saved" the cotton and wheat markets, doesn't exactly warrant any such confidence in congressional wisdom and competency. Even at the best, political wisdom never could accomplish anything that business interest and wisdom can not accomplish; and with a large part of the prevalent political interest in the country grossly demagogic, any attempt by the lawmakers in Washington to reform business hereafter will be almost more than America will be able to bear without weeping.

Presumably Mr. Couzens doesn't realize it, but there are passages in his lecture to the United States chamber of commerce highly suggestive of an indorsement of a diluted communism for this nation. Happily the people of our republic have not reached a point of mental and spiritual degeneracy which will permit them to welcome a combination of pauperism and slavery as a refuge from their economic ills.—Detroit Free Press.

Proper Chewing for Health.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

"You can never teach an old dog new tricks!" So goes the old saw.

People who do not chew their food properly, constantly seek medical advice. Neglect of early training is responsible.

Their complaints generally are headaches, "biliousness" and constipation. The same advice is always given, "Chew your food carefully, eat slowly, do not rush your meals, relax after meals." But all to no avail. An old man, like an old dog, can not be taught new tricks and certainly can not be expected to forget his old habits.

Once a habit is established the action becomes automatic. The time to develop and train habits is in childhood. This is particularly important in reference to the eating and chewing of food. Many adults dislike certain foods only because as children they never learned to acquire a taste for these foods.

Every infant and child, regardless of age, should eat regularly. With regular eating there will be regular sleeping. These desirable practices can only be acquired by fixed habit. It is the duty of the mother to see that the children are nursed or fed at regular times each day.

Young children should be urged to chew their food. The habit of deliberate and thorough chewing of food should be taught in early life.

At the time of teething and when the baby's teeth have come through the gums, encourage chewing. Never let the baby forget to use the jaws and as he grows older he will do so automatically.

Children should not eat with adults. They should eat either before or after their elders. This plan permits the parents to eat undisturbed. It does away with the temptation of giving "tastes" of this and that to the youngsters.

Children are great mimics. If one of the parents has a dislike for a certain food the child is likely to develop this dislike. Frequently such dislikes may be of important foods, such as milk, cereals, or vegetables.

No infant should be permitted to have a taste of anything that is not included in its regular food schedule. This practice leads to a habit that is far easier to prevent than to correct.

Every habit established in youth will plague or bless the adult. The foundation of health and vigor are laid in early life.

ANSWERS TO HEALTH QUERIES

MISS M. T. Q—What would cause a numb feeling in the side of the face and what treatment would be helpful?

A—Probably due to nerve affection. Have your doctor advise you after he has made examination. Application of heat might give increased comfort meanwhile.

MRS. J. C. C. Q—I am sixty-five years of age and have been troubled with insomnia and nervousness since my husband's death some years ago—what would you advise?

2—What will relieve piles? I have been troubled in this way for about a year.

A. Try to improve your general health and in this way benefit your nervous system. With good health you should enjoy sound, restful sleep.

2—What would you prescribe for a woman of thirty who is inclined to be anemic?

A—Probably due to some obstruction in the nasal passage—examination will determine the underlying cause and also suggest the necessary treatment. Be sure there is no catarrhal tendency. For full particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

2—The general rules for good health should help this condition.

The White Race's Cradle.

BY ARCHIBALD HENDERSON.

The discoveries of archaeology, of anthropology, of geology, of geography, and of climatology are all bringing us nearer to a solution of one of the most absorbing and baffling of problems in the history of the human race. It is not as yet positively known where the white man came from, this white race which many centuries ago inundated Europe and displaced the race living there.

Is Africa the cradle of the white man? Or is it Asia? And why does the choice narrow down to those two localities?

By slow and very gradual steps working painfully from reasonable inference to virtual certainty, science has long been advancing irresistibly toward the solution of this problem. It is one of the revolutionary discoveries of modern science that Europe was not always inhabited by white men. Scientists no longer doubt that white men displaced a different race, which had long inhabited Europe.

Almost three-quarters of a century ago, to be precise in 1857, fossil bones were found in a cave at Neanderthal, near Duesseldorf, on the Rhine. These bones were pronounced by Dr. Schaffhausen to be those of a peculiar type of man, different from the modern European stock. But no one suspected, and no one had the right to suspect on the strength of this isolated discovery, that the man whose bones had been discovered represented the real aborigines of Europe. This man was Neanderthal man. Some scientists, notably Virchow, hastily concluded that the bones were those of a pathologically deformed white man. Huxley shrewdly suspected that the bones were those of a primitive type of man, akin to the aborigines of Australia. Professor King, in Galway, made the surmise which has since proved to be correct, that in Neanderthal man a totally unknown, very ancient species of mankind had come to light.

Since this discovery of the bones of Neanderthal man, seventy-four years ago, remains of a similar type have been found in many parts of Europe, and even in Palestine and the Crimea. Scientists have definitely concluded that there was a time, perhaps 20,000 years ago, when the sole inhabitants of Europe were people of the Neanderthal type. It is probable that they came from the western part of Asia, possibly Turkestan, rather than from Africa. And this for the reason that many remains recently uncovered in Kenya show considerable and marked dissimilarities to the Neanderthal type of man.—Copyright, 1931, International Feature Service, Inc.

Chase and the English Estate Story.

BY J. H. GALBRAITH.

The first ancestor of Salmon P. Chase to come to America was Aquila Chase, an English shipmaster, who settled at Newbury, Massachusetts, about 1640. Salmon was the sixth in line of descent from Thomas Chase, of Chesham, England, a man of considerable estate and there was a tradition in the Chase family that because of a break in the line of inheritance in England of a large Chase estate was held irregularly in England that might be recovered if proper action were taken.

This story of an estate in England never seemed to make an appeal to Salmon, and so far as is known he never gave the matter any serious thought, in fact no thought at all until it was brought to his attention by a letter received when he was in Columbus serving as governor of he state. The writer, presumably a lawyer anxious to get a fee, traced the line carefully from Thomas in England to Salmon in Columbus, and indicated the break in the inheritance of the estate.

Governor Chase replied courteously to the letter, merely saying that he had no objection to the establishment of the relationship with the wealthy estate owner in England providing he were an honest man and voted the free-soil ticket, even though kinship were no closer than through our common ancestor Adam, but he had no faith in the English estate story and no desire to participate in it, even if it really existed, seeing that to take it would inflict great injury upon those in whose possession it then was and who doubtless acquired it by supposing the title was perfect. He added his own feeling that the best way to make a living was by honest labor. Mr. Chase's biographer noted that the stories of an improperly held Chase estate in England was like most such stories as to other families, wholly without foundation.

New York, April 20 — Diary of a modern Pepys: Awakened by loud ringing of the doorbell and it was the nit-wit, Mickey Nelson, who in greeting me left a cold, raw oyster in my hand. And did I fling it across the room. Talked on the phone also to Hal Mangum, the Mexico ranchman.

An afternoon trying to write an introduction to a friend's book and then out and came upon Julia Sanderson and Frank Crumitt and we talked of Crumitts' home town Jackson, Ohio, and I was tempted to ask Miss Sanderson to hum "You Wouldn't Believe Me."

In the evening to dine at Pierre's, and there was a squab served in a bird's nest of potato strips and on to see Al Jolson in "The Wonder Bar" enjoying it as much as the original in Berlin last summer. So talking to Mr. Chesterton, who has regained his health and enthusiasms.

The evening pajama rage for the ladies has gone beyond a mere fashion whim. Three stunning creatures swished through a corridor of Pierre's wearing them. Joe Weber and Lew Fields again enjoy their old professional comradeship. For a few years a coolness sprung up between them—the inevitable tinge of contempt that comes with such long intimacy. But radio work reunited them. They have an old-time theatrical office on west Fortieth street near Broadway. The walls are hung with costume photos of old Weber-Field stars—Lillian Russell, Pete Daly and all the rest. Fields is still the flashy dresser, splotching the Rialto horizon with an assortment of color that recalls the days when the actor made up for the street as well as the stage.

* * *

Weber and Fields have another unofficial office which they have maintained for at least twenty years. It is a round table which they have graced for luncheon in the Hunting room of the Hotel Astor almost daily, when in town, during the period. Here upon various occasions will be seen David Warfield, Adolph Zukor, George W. Lederer and now and again the old Roman—at which the Rialto once tittered—George M. Cohan.

Performers—I like better Junie McCree's spelling "paff-awmer"—were too hurriedly pitied when the legitimate stage wobbled. The fact is they have had the best break in the history of the stage. First came silent movies, recruiting thousands ripe for oblivion. Many who had heretofore essayed only character parts suddenly found themselves stars at salaries Mansfield or Joseph Jefferson never dreamed. Then came the talkies, a similar haven for as many more. The third re-birth was the radio, which as quickly puffed hundreds who were through into an unbelievable prosperity.

* * *

When I first came to New York there were two places where one might see the foremost of the theatrical stars—at luncheon at the Hotel Knickerbocker and the Sunday evening dinners at Browne's old chophouse on Broadway. But today there seems to be no focal point. Each apparently has a favorite speakeasy, hideway or something.

A Washington Daybook.

BY HERBERT PLUMMER.

Washington, April 20—No one mourned the passing of Nicholas Longworth more genuinely than an aged negro tucked away in a corner of the state department who acts as personal messenger to Francis White, assistant secretary of state.

Charlie was a White House servant for thirteen years, and a great part of this time he served as Alice Roosevelt's footman in the days when the debonair Nick was her suitor.

It was Charlie who was assigned as personal valet to Longworth at the time of the wedding at the executive mansion. He is never prouder than when he is asked to describe how he helped Longworth put on the suit he was to wear at the wedding.

In those days Charlie had the reputation of being the "fastest footman in town." He remained at the White House into the Taft administration.

* * *

Charlie delights to talk of the days when he served at the White House. And numerous are his stories in which "Princess Alice" and her late husband figure as the principals.

He has seen them both often since those days. Both remembered him, and never failed to greet him whenever they saw him. Mrs. Longworth recently made Charlie's breast swell with pride when, at an affair at the Pan-American union, she stepped out of her car, saw him standing by, and asked.

"How are you, Charlie?"

"Princess Alice' always chided him for his neglect of Paulina, whom he has never seen. He has promised her that he will come to see her soon.

"I want to see if she's another Roosevelt," he says simply.

* * *

It was an axiom among the newspapermen of Washington that Speaker Longworth was one official who could always be seen. His door was seldom closed.

Once a visiting foreign journalist came to the capital, sought out a Washington newspaper friend and asked if an "audience with the speaker could be arranged. He was greatly surprised when, without ceremony, he was ushered into Longworth's presence.

They talked informally. Finally the journalist asked:

"Mr. Speaker, I have read in the reports of congress that often the house indulges in what is called 'general debate.' I think we have no such thing in our law-making body. What is 'general debate?'"

"It's when a sweet singer sings his songs," replied the speaker. The journalist looked puzzled and Longworth smilingly explained.

"A sweet singer—he is a good deal like the water that goes over the dam—makes a big racket, but has nothing to do with the grinding of the grist."

AN UNSUNG HERO

Vagabond Slips Away Unnoticed After Saving Boy's Life.

By The Associated Press

WAUSAU, Wis., April 20 — Unsung, a vagabond walked the railroad ties into Wausau yesterday. Bright and sunshiny, it was a bright day to be on the road.

Two boys, Norman Knox, 7, and a playmate, inveigled by near-summer weather, decided to take a swim in the Wisconsin river near the tracks. The vagabond heard a scream. He rushed to the river, calling for help as he ran. He dived in, dragged one boy ashore, and went back into the water. Policeman Empy arrived and followed the stranger. Between them they pulled the Knox boy ashore, but he was dead.

As a crowd gathered and started to sing praises of the unidentified vagabond, he slipped out and disappeared down the tracks in his wet rags. It was a good day to be on the road.

NEW ATTACK AIMED AT MAYOR WALKER

Jimmy's Official and Private Life Assailed as He Completes Defense Plea.

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, April 20—Mayor Walker's defense of his administration was ready for delivery to Governer Roosevelt today, but scarcely had it been finished than he found himself subjected to attack from a new quarter.

The latest criticism came from the city affairs committee of the National Republican club, which charged "breakdown and demoralization of the city government." The first bill of complaint filed with the governor—that to which the mayor has drawn up his reply originated with the city affairs committee, a group which has no relation to the Republican club despite a similarity in names. Both call upon the governor to remove the mayor from office.

The report of the committee of the Republican club attacks the mayor in his private life as well as in his official positon.

"There have been two troubles with Mayor Walker," the report reads. "In the first place he has, as the world knows, given little time or attention to his job.

"He has joked, junketed to race tracks, sat up all night at wild parties, entertained Hollywood and ignored the city's problems. We have no concern with the mayor's private escapades except insofar as they interfere with his public duties."

The second objection to the mayor, the report said, is that he "is an integral part of a political machine which is interested in building up its own power and filling the pockets of its members rather than in governing the city well."

The city affairs committee, to whose charges the mayor wrote his reply, last night asked Governor Roosevelt for permission to file a rebuttal before he takes action.

RUSE BRINGS ARREST OF KIDNAPING TRIO

New York Co-ed Heiress Tricks Abductors into Arrest in Wisconsin.

By The Associated Press

MADISON, Wis., April 20—A 20-year-old youth, Harry Hamilton, Drill, son of a St. Paul, Minn., attorney, and two companions were held in jail today accused of kidnaping Drill's co-ed heiress wife, Helen Fischer Drill, 19, in New York.

A ruse of the wife led to the arrest of Drill, Harold Caldwell, 20, and Elmer Peterson, 27, also of St. Paul.

Along the way she left penciled notes telling of her plight. One of them scrawled on a paper towel in a La Porte, Ind., filling station, resulted in the arrests.

It read: "Have been kidnaped. Please inform—(name withheld by authorities)—of Port Richmond, N. Y., next stop Park Hotel, Madison. They sent my clothes there."

She left the water running in the washroom so an attendant would be certain to find the note. The message was found and relayed to Sheriff F. T. Finn here. The men were arrested at the Park hotel. Finn said Caldwell and Peterson confessed complicity in the affair. The husband was evasive and after a long distance telephone call to his father said he would fight extradition.

The young wife, missing from her New York apartment since Thursday, said she was forced into an automobile owned by a Columbia university student, transferred to another car and compelled to come west with her husband and his companions.

The brief and periodic matrimonial adventures of the couple have been stormy, the girl told Finn. A divorce is pending between the pair, already remarried after the first marriage was annulled.

Hygienic Rinse Adds Luster To Hair; Improves Old Formula

BY JOSEPHINE HUDDLESTON

Several women have written me recently for further information concerning the hygienic rinse which is apparently a trifle misunderstood.

The hygienic rinse was formulated to brighten the hair However, because of the wide and constant use of this and similar preparations some means of preventing the rinse from harming the texture of the hair was needed Once this ingredient was found and the formula worked out the brightening rinse became protective in its action as well as bleaching, hence the clever idea of calling it hygienic.

Strong bleaching preparations on the hair tend to weaken its structure which all women who have used such solutions over a long period of time have found out. Milder bleaches, which need to be used more often because their action is less pronounced than when stronger ones are favored, act on the hair in the same way, although the reaction is less noticeable for a time because the process of deterioration is slower.

However, beauty specialists are at work all of the time seeking ways and means of preventing possible harmful effects from drastic beauty treatment which made radical changes in the color of the hair.

In those cases where brightening the hair and not actual bleaching is desired the hygienic rinse solves the problem successfully, for added to the ingredients used for slight bleaching is still another preparation which has long been used to promote better health and texture for the hair, namely the lowly cider vinegar from the pantry shelf!

The hygienic rinse is made by adding two (2) tablespoonfuls of peroxide and three (3) drops of ordinary household ammonia to one pint of warm water To this add two (2) or two and a half (2½) tablespoonfuls of pure cider vinegar. Stir the mixture thoroughly and then, rinsing the hair to remove all soap pour on the solution Let it remain on for five or ten minutes ,a little longer if you wish to make a more marked change in the color of your hair, and then rinse off the solution with clear, warm water.

The old formula for brightening the hair a la peroxide or ammonia was simply to add the peroxide and ammonia to the warm water and pour it over the hair As explained above, however, it was found that this apparently mild solution eventually caused a coarsening and weakening of the texture of the hair. But by adding the vinegar, which has remedial qualities, the harmful action of the peroxide and ammonia is offset.

ical laboratory developing "new uses for farm products." You must come and spend two days in the laboratory," says he

Instead of complaining about conditions, business men should be grateful for what they have. According to Ford "everything is all right up to this second. It is our business to make a change" He doesn't say what change.

He tells of a recent talk with Gerard Swope, president of General Electric, whom he calls "the best salesman in America." The talk included Russia, and Ford said: "The Russians pay their bills, and have a right to make their own experiments, as long as they don't interfere with ours."

After an hour and a half talk, he returns to Dearborn, where he was born an American boy with no better chance at the start than any one of 1,000,000 boys, now starting.

As he left he said, "Going to Chicago tonight? Say hello to Julius Rosenwald if you see him."

Henry Ford, thinking hard throughout every working hour, possesses power to change thought into reality. A blessed gift.

He thinks he is free, but he is the slave of his own genius. His only happiness is achievement, as is the case with all men that do work worth while.

Men driving tractors, now plowing up a thousand acres of Ford's farm at Dearborn, for experiments with soybeans and other crops, need not envy Henry Ford. They have more "fun" and leisure than he has.

He does not envy them, or any one, for he is "a man diligent in his business."

"Heart of a Wife"

BY ADELE GARRISON

Roderick Complicates Matters.

I WAS Dicky who came to my aid as I stood pondering how I could manage so that Hank and Madge need not make their first appearance before Marion in the wrinkled clothing, in which they had driven down from New York—certainly their greatest dread.

"Madge!" he called from his door. "Tell Hank and Bill to put on the shoes and socks and shirts and ties and belts they wear with their blue coats and white flannel pants. They can wear any pants they wish and the blue coats which I pressed, then if we have any luck they can change into the new white flannels from the tailor's and come back the pictures of fashion and all the rest of it—whatever it is—and all ready for dinner."

"Dicky! You are a monumental genius!" I said relieved as I rushed toward the boys' door.

Business of Modesty yielding to pride, and acknowledging the justice of your tribute," he called back, vanishing into his room, and I knocked on the boys' door with a grateful little feeling for Dicky's resourcefulness.

"Who's there?" Bill called, and I answered quickly:

"Don't bother to open the door, boys, but listen carefully." I gave them Dicky's message and went back to the telephone, succeeding in getting the numbers for which Dicky had asked by the time he came out of his room.

"Bill Bates says he thinks he has just what you want," I told him, "and the tailor will wait for you, ready to do anything you need."

"Thanks a lot, Efficiency Emma," Dicky said as he went past me, but I caught him by the arm and swung him toward me.

"If the Underwoods come in while you're getting away, don't stop for any parley, just rush the boys off before the girls have a chance to see them," I told them. "The boys are simply frantic for fear——"

"I get you, Stephenson," Dicky said, freeing himself, "and I'll obey orders. But if we don't get started——"

A motor horn blared from below and the door of the boys' room flew open.

"Isn't that the Underwood car?" Hank demanded.

"If it is, you don't need to get all hot and bothered," Dicky told him. "You and Bill cut down the backstairs, but don't come out through the kitchen till I give you the office. Madge, you go down and get 'em into the house and away from that side veranda. I'll watch my chance to make a getaway."

Roderick Confesses

"Telephone me from Bridgehampton how long you'll be, so I can tell Katie about dinner," I directed.

"All right. What's eating you, lads?" as Hank and Bill hesitated.

"You—you don't—" they both began, and stopped, their faces a brick red.

"Don't have to tell anybody about the reason for this trip," I finished. "No, there's no need for anybody to know."

"Scoot!" Dicky demanded chokingly, as the boys raced to the back stairway out of our sight, he leaned against the wall, helpless with laughter.

"Go on down," he gasped after a second, waving his hands at me, "and ride herd on the Underwoods. Oh, this takes sixteen years off my age."

Half way down the stairs, I heard my mother-in-law's voice

"Margaret, where are you? I want you."

"I'll be with you in a minute, Mother," I called back. "There's something I must do for Dicky."

"Don't bother!" Her voice was crisp, offended. "It isn't important. Yes, yes, Roderick," impatiently. "Go on down. Your arm can't be hurt as much as you thought, or you'd be willing to sit down quietly for awhile."

She went back into her room, and her door closed with the emphasis which spells irritation on her part. With the dubious hope that she might forget her resentment by dinner time, I went on down the stairs, paying no attention to Roderick's hurrying feet behind me. I was annoyed at Roderick's insistence that Hank had burned him deliberately, an insistence which I interpreted as a stubborn disinclination to change his first unreasoning impression of the incident. But when his voice, troubled, appealing, came to me, "Auntie Madge," I turned and smiled encouragingly at him.

"What is it, Roderick?"

He ran down the steps between us, and slipped his hand into mine.

"I—I—just want to tell you that Hank didn't burn me on purpose. I thought he did just for a second, and then I knew better. But I just couldn't make my tongue talk any different. Am I awful bad, Annie, by the steaming towels.

"No, I won't say that, Roderick, but it was an awful thing to say of anybody if you were not sure. You know what you ought to do, do you not?"

"Sure, I know. I've got to tell him before the rest that I didn't really think so. Gee!"

He brought up a sigh from his toes, muttered an "Excuse me, please," and clattered past me down the stairs. It was not until he was out of earshot that I realized what his public "confession of sin" would mean. It would betray the embarrassing sartorial trouble which Hank and Bill were so anxious to keep from the knowledge of the girls.

A Story of Boyhood Adventure

BY JUDD M. LEWIS

YESTERDAY was one cold Sunday. If it was any colder I would of thought winter had turned around and was coming back. I told Jubilee that if it wasn't for him I wouldn't have to open the window every morning and stand in the cold climate in my shirttail and let him down and almost catch peonia, and if I ever do catch it it will be his fault. He looked interested and wagged his tail. And the wind cracked my shirttail like a whiplash.

When I had pulled down my short britches all over my goose pimples and had went downstairs and out to the barn with the milk pail to feed and milk the dummed brutes most of the bunch were there, and when I had got all of them milked but one Feeble and Youniss and Maggie came in, and Maggie asted me if I would let her try to milk and I told her to go to it. So she took the stool and the milk pail and sot down on the wrong side of the old cow, which I had already milked, and the first thing the cow done was to feel that something was wrong and she wropped her tail around Maggie's neck and yanked her off the stool.

Maggie certainly looked supprized and foolish, but she tried it again, and then the cow lammed loose at her with a hind leg, and if I hadn't been standing right behind her to yank her out of the way I don't know what would have happened to her. She was all dirty from being knocked off the stool the first time, and she was mad at the cow and me, and she went home to get a clean dress on. She said I ought to keep the floor of the barn cleaner. I told her I clean it every week whether it needs it or not, and anyway a cowbarn floor isn't to be sot on.

I guess my mother was glad she hadn't let the bass burner go out yet, and she left the oven door of the gas stove open and that helped warm the house. She said that she couldn't account for the cold spell. My grandfather said the weather man was probably killing a peach crop somewhere. I got washed by my ant, and then she went after me with the towel like she was trying to polish me. I wanted to tell her she ought to start an automobile laundry, but all I got for that was an up-stroke that almost turned my nose wrong side out.

Today was Monday and the wind was still blowing hard off the lake, so it was still cold, and every fella was told to scatter and get a piece of wood and we made a fire over in the vacant lot and roasted some potatoes and et them. When a potato is well roasted you can wipe the ashes and the skin off of it on your pants and it tastes better than the potatoes you get at home. Bunt Miller whose father works in the stink factory and makes Bunt wear his old clothes got so warm that when he went home with his dog another fella had been

The Lost Jewel

DASHING into Charters' vacant bedroom, as Marjorie and Sister Weldon waited safely outside the walls—I took his keys from beneath his pillow and rushed to his consulting room. Swiftly I unlocked a little door in the upper part of his big desk, the part that, consisting of pigeon-holes and cupboards rose up at the back of the leather-covered table part at which he wrote.

From a locked drawer in this cupboard I took another bunch of keys, among which was a small instrument shaped something like the blade of a screw-driver.

With one of these keys, I opened yet another little cupboard, and on the floor of this, I discovered a neat round hole. Inserting the screw-driver blade I soon found the head of a large screw, and withdrew it.

Having done this, I seized one end of the upper part of the desk in both hands, and swung it around on its hidden central axis, so that it stood across the desk at right angles to its usual position.

This exposed, at each end of the desk, an area that was covered by the back of the desk when in normal position.

In each of these horizontal areas was a keyhole. With one of the keys of the second bunch, I unlocked and raised a flap that covered a box, of which it was the lid.

In this cavity were a number of small bottles labeled "Poison." From one containing a red powder, I withdrew the stopper, tipped out the contents, and exposed a small key.

With this I unlocked and raised the lid of the cavity on the right-hand side of the deck. This cavity also contained bottles, boxes, and tins. One of the latter, apparently a quarter-pound tobacco tin that had never been opened, I removed and pocketed.

It contained my diamond, the Unsetting Sun.

My knowledge of its hiding-place was due partly to the skill, cleverness, courage and persistence of Williams H. William, and partly to my own nightly prowlings, generally fruitless, behind the heavy curtain that had served me so well on the first day of my visit to the more to me a symbol of success Monastery.

I had recovered by diamond, now than a thing of intrinsic value. My diamond—that had cost me Rosemary's life—and yet had saved Marjorie's.

I had triumphed over my enemies and had seen the worst and vilest of them die at my feet like a poisoned dog.

I had found Love—and with it Faith, Hope and Charity—for I had found Marjorie.

And in the same hour I lost her, or rather, learned that I had found her too late.

Perhaps suffering does—as poets and moralists have sung and said—act upon the human mind as does the furnace fire upon the earthly ore.

Perhaps pain and sorrow and suffering are good, and it is true that we emerge from them, if emerge we do, stronger and braver and better. I don't know.

But I do know that I was able to meet this fresh blow as a man should, and to stand up to it, and while standing up to it, conceal its terrible effects.

Or, again, of course, it may be that I had received so shattering a blow when Rosemary met her dreadful fate, that my mind and soul had lost some of their capacity for suffering.

Anyhow—Marjorie was engaged to be married—a fact the possibility of which had positively never entered my mind.

I had had so much else of which to think that I had almost visualized her as having no outside relationships save with her weak, worthless uncle and his infamous wife.

Marjorie was engaged to be married. Her fiance was in India. She would shortly be of age, and she wished to go out to him.

So be it. I would take her and see her safe into his care.

For three weeks I should be continually in her company. In that time I would find out something about her lover, and at the end of it I would meet him and sum him up.

If Marjorie loved him doubtless he was worthy.

But did she love him—or was it a boy and girl affair? Well, I should have that three weeks. Three weeks of Paradise ineffable and, if it must be, Paradise enow.

• • •

How shall I tell of that voyage? I cannot, if I would. Like Dante, I have been in Heaven, but I am no Dante to tell of it.

It lasted for a moment. It lasted for years—21 wonderful days, each of which was a year—each filled with wonderful and innumerable happenings of indescribable and unimaginable loveliness, joy and glory; a smile upon Marjorie's lovely lips; a happy laugh, the sweetest music in this world; a pressure of loving hands upon my arms as we walked the moonlit deck . . . For they were loving hands. Marjorie loved me, I'm sure and, but for her cousin, might have fallen in love with me, I verily believe.

But who was I, gray, grim and battered—although scarce 40 years of age—a hunted convict with a price upon his head? Who was I that I should make love to Marjorie Lauderdell?

One of the few things to which, in reviewing my life, I can look back with satisfaction, is the fact that loving, worshiping, adoring her as I did, I was able to refrain from making love to her. But I love to know that Marjorie loved me, and I love to think that, in happier circumstances, she might perchance have fallen in love with me, and loved me indeed as I loved her.

There is much of love in this last sentence. Well, it is better than hate, and so, thanking Marjorie and God, let me end upon that note.
